BARTON&GUESTIER PINOT NOIR RÉSERVE

”Gentle cherry notes”

Story

The grapes for B&G Réserve Pinot Noir are harvested on the island of Corsica, a respected wine-producing area, though relatively unknown to many. Few origin labels are as impressive as this wine's IGP Ile de Beaute, which translates to 'Island of Beauty.' The island naturally has a Mediterranean climate, warm, windy, with plenty of sunlight, but the cool nights give the wine its acidity. The grape bunches are destemmed and macerated in very cold conditions for three days before fermentation, which is carried out by gradually raising the temperature and mixing the skins into the juice twice daily.

Producer

Barton & Guestier is a wine business with an almost three-century-long history, founded by the Irishman Thomas Barton in 1725 when he settled in the city of Bordeaux. In 1802, his grandson partnered with the Frenchman Daniel Guestier, and the business flourished for a long time, shipping Bordeaux wine on ships to Ireland, England, the Netherlands, and the USA. The esteemed company faced its biggest challenges due to the devastation caused by phylloxera and the two World Wars. While no longer family-owned, the traditions persist with dedicated professionals delivering French wines to 130 different countries, widely available even at international airports. Barton & Guestier's range showcases an impressive array of France's important wine regions: Bordeaux, the Loire Valley, Burgundy, Beaujolais, the Rhône Valley, Languedoc, Gascony, and Corsica. The company collaborates with around 200 winegrowers in these areas. Barton & Guestier focuses on offering high-quality, typically French wines to the world while considering the requirements of sustainable development.
