

"Big American wine"

Story Ironstone's Obsession Red Blend blend is Merlot (50%), Zinfandel (40%) and Petite Sirah (10%). The grapes come from sand-based Lodi and volcanic, from the iron-rich Sierra Foothills vineyards east of San Francisco. The vineyards are operated in a thorough manner in accordance with the principles of sustainable development. The wine gets only a short 3-month maturation in French oak casks, to keep the wine as fruity as possible.

Producer The Kautz family's ambitious project, Ironstone, is headquartered in Lodi, California, but its actual production, visitor center, and the amphitheater used for concerts draw people to the village of Murphys, which was an important center during the California Gold Rush. The combination of excellent wine, events, and high-quality hospitality defines the estate's operations, although their wine production alone is significant both in quantity and quality. Ironstone is one of California's largest family-owned wineries and operates in line with sustainable practices.

COLOR Deep dark red

AROMA Vanilla with lush scent, milk chocolate, raspberries, blackcurrant, black cherries, fig, herbs, minerals and spices

TASTE Full-bodied, silky tannins, sweetly fruity, dark notes of berry, notes of vanilla, spicy and baked. The taste is structured, mouth-filling on the palate, astonishing in its succulence, long and beautifully developed. At the same time, it is easily approachable and dangerously enjoyable

TIPS FOR USE The perfect meaty wine of a hardened barbecue. The question remains in the morning reflections on whether it is a rib-eye, flank steak, tomahawk, ribs, fillet... Of course, it also pairs well with strong cheeses, especially with salted blue cheese. The most surprising thing is the ease of this richly tasted wine: It is also a great socialising and enjoying drink when slightly chilled.
