MEZZACORONA SAUVIGNON BLANC

”Trentino Sauvignon Blanc”

Story

Sauvignon Blanc is one of the most popular wines in the world – and on the hills of Trentino, it gets its own expression. Vines grow on the middle slopes looking at the Adige River, where the temperature fluctuations are big. This gives the wine its fresh acidity. The variety of aromas of the wine is vegetative and it takes structure from a short skin contact. Fine fruity is maintained when fermented at a low temperature of 16-18 °C, and the use of a steel tank ensures a balance of style under the conditions of the grape variety. The wine is versatile and enjoyable.

Producer

"Mezzacorona is a cooperative located in Trentino Alto Adige. It was established back in 1904 when 11 founding members joined forces. The company is renowned for its efficient production of high-quality wines. Currently, it boasts over 1,500 farmer members managing vineyards covering a total of approximately 2,800 hectares. The region's geographical position plays a pivotal role in viticulture: the soil, altitude, Mediterranean climate, and the presence of the Alps create various microclimates and vineyards, providing optimal conditions for several grape varieties. Among the most cultivated are Chardonnay and Pinot Grigio. Mezzacorona's agronomists assist farmers in selecting the most suitable grape varieties for each vineyard and soil type. The company's operations are based on sustainable development practices. Nearly all waste is recycled, and between 2015 and 2019, the amount of waste produced decreased by up to 56%. About 70% of the wine cellars are located underground, maintaining ideal temperature and humidity without mechanical regulation. A significant portion of the electricity is generated by solar panels, and local suppliers are supported in procurement. Mezzacorona obtained the sustainable development SQNPI certification in 2016."
